Use of English Keys:

Task 1

Although living in another country can be an (1) exciting adventure, it is sometimes proves (2) to be a difficult experience. Many things are new and different – not only the language and culture but also (3) everyday things like where to buy stamps or when banks are open. For a person who is used (4) to being in control of their world these new experiences can make them feel helpless, (5) confused and frustrated.

Many of those who start a life somewhere else often go through certain (6) stages before they feel at home in their new (7) surroundings. The first few weeks after arrival in another country is full of positive feelings and excitement. Then (8) reality sets in and can make you feel angry and impatient. Some people (9) blame their new home for such feelings. Eventually, however, most newcomers settle (10) in and begin to adapt.

However, when a person returns to their own culture, they may (11) experience the same things in reverse. It takes them (12) some time to get back to their former life in their home country.
